Captain's Corner

By Ted Klosowski

May

The Tycho had a very busy May. We had our trip to Holland, MI to see the tulips, our anniversary dinner and a trip to Lourdes Appold Planetarium. Our trip to Holland was most enjoyable and I would like to thank again our drivers Jerry and Linda. They got us there and back safely and it was a very long drive. I also would like to thank everyone else that attended for making it a very enjoyable day.

Our anniversary dinner was also a lot of fun. We had tons of food and lots of fun. There were awards and promotions and a great time was had by all.

This issue is also the end of our Tycho story Dyson Sphere Redux. I hope you enjoyed it! Next month we will have a short story by Wynn timer which I know you will like.

Coming up we have Guy's 4th of July bash, a kayak trip and our next meeting on June 1 at 6:30 pm at Charlie's and on Zoom! Keep an eye out on our Facebook page and your emails for future events.

Please enjoy the pictures this month which include our trip to Holland Michigan to see the tulips and our anniversary dinner. Special thanks to Lisa and Paula for supplying the pictures!

We hope to see you at our next meeting on Thursday, June 1, 6:30 pm at Charlie's and on Zoom!

Dyson Sphere Redux

By Ted Kłosowski

Chapter 14—The Final Chapter

The Tycho, now reunited with the Waverider is being hailed by the Hur'q.

"Captain, why did you leave so abruptly?"

"I kind of figured we, errr, overstayed our welcome?"

"What makes you say that?"

"Well? I guess the part where you were all chanting Kill Them, Kill Them?"

"Oh that, haha. We were just joshing haha. Can't take a joke, captain? We didn't even have a chance to show you around haha. Won't you come back so we can show you around?"

"Thank you for the offer, perhaps another time? How about a rain check? And about those charges..."

"No charges captain, we were just joking on that haha. We look forward to seeing you again, maybe when you can stay longer!"

"Perhaps, another day Hur'q leader, thank you for your 'hospitality'."

"Good day, captain"

The Tycho with the Waverider aboard proceeded to quickly exit the sphere. Once safely out of the sphere the crew erupts in chatter.

"Can you believe they put us on trial" "Their ships were a joke, it's a good thing we didn't have a showdown" "What did you think of the Hur'q?" "...and the smell" "I would have loved to spend more time in there."

"What do you think, captain, can we go back down?" Lisa asks.

"We barely got out of there with our heads! I don't think so." Ted replies.

"They did say they were joking haha," Wynnie replied.

All chuckled

"Paula, get us out of here!"

The End...for now!

Tycho: UFO Encounter

By Sherriea and Belinda Williams

10: Planning for A Difficult Gig

While Captain Ted and Ambassador Sutherland completed their physical examinations in sick bay, Governor Alta decided to return to the bridge where he could continue studying the alien vessel. He entered the turbo lift and efficiently extended his right appendage to grasp the hand held control that ordered its destination. The enclosure smoothly and swiftly shot forward with a slight jolt. Within five seconds, it ceased and its trajectory changed directions as it climbed towards the bridge. Another five seconds transpired and the lift halted. A disembodied voiced announced, "You have arrived at the bridge. Disembark safely!" Once the lift's sliding doors opened, Alta floated over the threshold and on to the deck. He unceremoniously veered towards the portal that was facing the now closer alien ship. He seemed grounded to the floor and totally focused on the disabled vessel that floated beside the Tycho. The busy helm crew took no particular notice of their former crew member.

Alta remained transfixed until his sensors distracted his concentration. Yeoman Tol appeared to drift into his peripheral vision, saying "Sir, may I be of assistance?" Governor Alta replied in an equally polite tone, "No, Yeoman, but thanks for your offer." As if on cue, Captains Ted and Paula accompanied by Ambassador Sutherland emerged from the turbo lift to join the android who peered through the portal. Captain Ted asked the governor, "Watching the Grays, Alta?" Alta replied "Yes, I am gaining some insight from my surveillance capabilities." Paula queried, "How are you doing that?" Alta replied, "My systems have the same scanning abilities as our vessel. I believed you will be intrigued at what data I have observed." Ted replied, "Please enlighten us, Alta."

Alta continued, "as I stated in the briefing room, I can recreate the audio and visual properties aboard the alien ship. Follow me." The android entered the captain's private bridge office and seated himself at a computer console. He addressed the computer, "Computer access code now Alta AI unit number NCC-59325-A for Tycho systems." Filtering and reorganizing his spectral data, he lifted his right hand, pointing a digit and focused a thin blue beam onto the computer console until a voice erupted from the device stating, "Received and complete. Ready to project audio and visual images, now."

The ambassador and the two captains were silently anticipating what analytical data Alta had collected. What they observed was a bit unexpected. There appeared on the screen, groups of individuals yelling and throwing items at each other. Alta stated the obvious, "They seem frustrated and angry. The sound of their speech is unfamiliar to me except for this sound bite." He raised the volume. One voice could be clearly declaring a terran insult: "Damn these terran imbeciles!" Ambassador Sutherland commented, "So it seems they know a little urban lingo."

Captain Ted stated, "Excellent work, Alta. " Yes, this will be a challenge for us." Ted ordered this video transmitted to the other starships at this location.

"Alta, you may proceed with your plan within three hours. The ambassador and I will be ready for you." Governor Alta made a ship wide announcement to all the Tycho crew, "Inform me of any unusual activities you may observe."

An hour before Alta's planned act of diplomacy, he reported to Captain Ted. "I have translated most of their spoken language. The Grays as we call them may actually be the beings of earth folklore. Their vernacular is laced with human based expletives which they implore with acts of anger." The governor showed additional footage of a youthful Gray showing signs of insubordination toward an older senior who seemed to be in a position of authority. Captain Ted shrugged his shoulders and turned his palms up, as he declared, "This will be a very complicated gig, Alta. Are you up for it?"

On the bridge Captain Ted rose from his command chair. He spoke, "Commander Sherriea, open hailing frequencies to the Gray vessel." Sherriea replied, "Aye, captain, hailing frequencies open." They waited for what seemed like a very long time. Meanwhile, Sherriea repeated the process several more times without a response. Alta interrupted the captain, "May I suggest, given their propensity for distrust of humans, we send them our own SOS through my own faculties of digital communications.” Sherriea commented, “Your frequencies are weaker Alta than Tycho, but I can boost your signal. I agree, let’s give it a try, but only as an SOS.” Alta stood next to the communications console and transmitted his signal with Sherriea’s enhancement. After the second try, the Gray vessel gave a reply. Captain Ted replied, “Good show, Sherriea and Alta! Tap into their shipwide speakers and transmit this announcement in their linguo.” Alta complied and was instantly rewarded with a complex phaseology of signals in the hundreds. Governor Alta responded, “I am receiving the Grays’ reply.” Captain Ted ordered, “Sherriea, run it through the translator.” The bridge fell silent. Captain Ted spoke directly to the alien ship and the echo of his announcement was heard in the background of the alien commander’s response. Ted repeated, “This is the USS Tycho. I am Captain Ted commanding this Federation fleet. We mean you no harm. Please respond if you are able.” Alta translated the Terran based transmission to the Gray’s native language.” Finally, the Gray commander spoke to them in earth English.

A light tenor voice spoke, “I am Core, the commander of a small scientific and exploratory fleet of educators and students in training. My ship’s signature is what you would call in your language, ‘Infinity’. We are unarmed and do not intend to invade your space. However, it appears that your vessel perceived us as probable adversaries. Thus, my fleet was disabled by your warrior vessels. Am I mistaken?” Captain Ted replied, “Your perception is correct. When your ship failed to respond to our hailing frequencies, we reacted with a show of restrained force. I regret this misunderstanding between us. We would prefer to assist you as you appear to be having technical issues with your communications and engines. As a show of benevolence, I would like you to receive an emissary of good will from our crew to assist you. He is quite skilled in many areas of science. What do you say to our best representative of the Federation, Governor Alta.”

Chief Medical Officer Report

By Donna-Marie Mominee

On Joy

Some days there appear to be little of joy. Seems that the political strife is rising, people oftentimes are more unfriendly, bad things seem to be a daily occurrence. Well, a little joy, even a spark of it can help reduce chronic illness, making your immune system a bit better, and strengthen your reserves!

"Unlike other emotions, you can prepare more for it!" So says Dr. Philip C. Watkins, a psychologist at Eastern Washington University. "The best joy is probably most generally experienced in relationships." Meaningful goals and purpose is also essential.

So, here are some suggestions to achieve small amounts of joy every day, no matter what's happening:

1. WRITE A JOY BUCKET LIST

There are inevitable times when it appears everything might seem to be spiraling out of control. Robin Shear, a life coach in Detroit, turns to her "joy bucket list," a tally of all things that make her happy: test-driving fast cars or sharing new experiences with her family. Make your list and store it in a very accessible space.

2. MAKE DAILY NEW HABITS YOU LOOK FORWARD TO

It could be as simple as coffee or tea in a colorful mug. "Joy is a multisensory," says Dr. Cohen, a sociology professor at the University South Carolina, Beaufort. Think about ways to schedule pleasurable habits into your day. Then savor the anticipation of them, because that's part of the joy.

3. FIND PALATABLE WAYS TO EXPRESS GRATITUDE

Gratitude fuels well-being, research has shown. Think about creative ways to reflect on and appreciate the good parts of your life – Find one small thing that's good about every day, even on the bad days.

4. LOOK FOR CONNECTION

Nora McInerny, host of the podcast "Terrible, Thanks for Asking," gets lost in gloominess and seeks connection such as a call to a loved or dearly loved friend. Even catching someone's eye and maybe a brief smile can be enough/

5. TAKE A SHORT "RECESS"

Small amounts of physical activity can elevate your mood and cut risk of depression. Robin Shear says maybe schedule a five - or 10-minute play session – hula hooping, "dance-march" once or twice a day. Maybe set a fun ring tone of your phone alarm to remind you it's time.

6. DANCE IT OUT

Music is a reliable way to spark a few minutes of joy, according to Melanie Horth, a psychologist based in Santa Fe, NM. Create a happiness playlist full of fun upbeat music.

Berry Orange Jello Salad

Submitted by Paula Wethington Rose

* Two large boxes strawberry jello. I used the 4 ounce Starburst strawberry flavor, which is pink.

* Two 15-ounce cans mandarin oranges.

* 2 cups total strawberries and blueberries diced in small pieces.

* 1 1/2 cups mini marshmallows.

Note: this quantity is for potluck size, I doubled up how much I would normally make.

Each large jello package calls for 1 1/2 cups boiling water and 1 1/2 cups cold water. Use boiling water and dissolve the gelatin as usual ... but!

For the cold water step, save the liquid from the canned oranges, and then add cold water to that for a total 1 cup cold liquid per package. The orange liquid adds the extra flavor.

Basic formula: I cut the cold water amounts by 1/3. This modification keeps fruity jello from getting too runny.

Stir the dissolved gelatin, liquid and oranges and other fruit in the serving bowl or jello mold you plan to chill it in.

Dump in the marshmallows and stir again. They will float to top after melting a bit. The fruit will float around and settle to bottom and middle.

Put the serving bowl in fridge. It will take about four hours to set, so do the prep a day ahead or early morning before serving.

My potluck dish where I brought the jello salad is a Pyrex casserole carrier that came with both hot pad and freezer pad pockets. That particular one is no longer made, but there are others on the market.

From the Chaplain

By Justin Hunt KGO

Relationships

While working my way through Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, I have been reminded many times over why it is my personal favorite iteration in the franchise. One of the more fascinating aspects of it is that in this installation in the franchise we see a three generational relationship in the Siskos. This is unique in the Trek universe. Many of the other characters in the franchise have less than ideal relationships with their parents and/or children.

What makes this even more impressive is that the strong connection is through the male line. It has been an unlikeable trend in film and literature to propagate the idea of strained relationships between men in general and even more so between men in a family line. Television has been getting better about showing healthy relationships between fathers and their children. However, at the time of Deep Space Nine's release, many drama-based shows and movies were using strained relationships as character building. The sad truth is that it is believable because in many cases it is the same as in real life.

We live in a world where there is a special emphasis on the relationships we build with others; often outside of our family. The term applied is "family we choose". These relationships are infinitely meaningful and well worth maintaining. However, this world also tells us that it is perfectly valid to sever relationships that cause us harm. This point is not without merit. There are many people that we will come into contact with that, for whatever reason, will cause us harm.

What we are not told is where the line between disagreements and irreconcilable differences is. We are not educated as to the point at which harmful behavior begins. Forgiveness is always something that is urged, as grudges do more to harm the one holding them than whom they are held against. But there is at no point an explanation given as to when reconciliation between the parties is unadvisable. We are left to find all of this out on our own.

How do we learn this? Trial and error are effective means of learning but are far from the preferred method in matters of the heart. The best way is by seeing what a healthy relationship looks like. In the characters of the Siskos, Joseph, Benjamin, and Jake, we see just that. Joseph wanted his son to be a chef and keep the family restaurant going. Benjamin chose life in Starfleet. That decision led to many disagreements, especially during the Dominion infiltration of the Federation. Yet, the two were able to talk about their differences and grow through them. Then, Benjamin had expected Jake to follow in his footsteps. Jake chose writing. Benjamin was supportive, and yet there were moments of friction. Just as with he and his father, Benjamin worked through his differences with his son.

At the same time, Benjamin was regularly put into situations requiring him to work with Dukat. No matter how much service he was at times, no matter what they had to go through together, Benjamin never became more than an acquaintance. He knew that there could be no friendship or even respect. However, that didn't allow him to hold enough of a grudge to treat Dukat's daughter poorly.

It is an unfortunate truth that not all of us are blessed to have that type of example in our lives. But we can look at this example and see what we can take from it. We can ask ourselves; "How can this inform our relationships with others?", "Are we letting little disagreements get in the way of something great?" "Are we allowing momentary commiseration to blind us to genuinely toxic behavior?", "Are we letting our injuries at the hands of another cause us to hurt those who didn't hurt us?" We must ask ourselves questions like these regularly to ensure that it is the healthiest relationships possible that are being kept in our lives. May we all have lives filled with great friends and loving family.

GLISTENING STAR CLUSTERS

The densely packed globular cluster NGC 6325 glistens in this image from the NASA/ESA Hubble Space Telescope. This concentrated group of stars lies around 26,000 light-years from Earth in the constellation Ophiuchus.

Globular clusters like NGC 6325 are tightly bound collections of stars with anywhere from tens of thousands to millions of members. They can be found in all types of galaxies and act as natural laboratories for astronomers studying star formation. This is because the constituent stars of globular clusters tend to form at roughly the same time and with similar initial composition, meaning astronomers can use them to fine-tune their theories of how stars evolve. Astronomers inspected this particular cluster not to understand star formation, but to search for a hidden monster. Though it might look peaceful, astronomers suspect this cluster could contain an intermediate-mass black hole that is subtly affecting the motion of surrounding stars. Previous research found that the distribution of stars in some highly concentrated globular clusters – those with stars packed relatively tightly together – was slightly different from what astronomers expected.
