

Ten Forward

Official Publication of the USS Renegade NCC-2547

From the CO Vice Admiral John Hoppa

Crew,

The month of February is over and we kicked off the year pretty great!

We made $114 at the Toyhio Toy Show and we are looking forward to the Super Toy event in April. We have some time to gear up for that show since it is at the end of April.

The Retro Con has been set. It will be September 7th & 8th. We still plan on doing a recruiting table there for Starfleet. I hope we can get some other chapters to help out that are from the area.

The Anniversary Dinner went really well. We had a great time and gave out several awards. For a full list, check out page 3 for the winners.

Other cons that are coming up are the Steel City Con in Monroeville, PA and the same weekend is the Fan Expo Con in Cleveland on April 12th-14th. Strange that they are the same weekend.

Check the Celebrities attending for more info. Some of us will be helping out the USS Lagrange at the Fan Expo Con.

We have a few Fleet and Regional issues to discuss at the upcoming meeting. Those that are in Starfleet need to be present for important voter information.

There is a few amendments to the SF constitution and it's the nomination phase for Regional Coordinator.

See everyone at the next meeting!

XO RADM. Janice R. Graham: I attended our regular meeting on February 13th. I also attended our 35th Anniversary Dinner on February 17th and assisted with presenting our ship awards. It's hard to believe the Senior Follies will be starting in a month. This year's theme of "Another Day in Paradise" promises to be very interesting music-wise.

Capt. Lisa Eckenrode- Hope everyone who went to the Anniversary Dinner enjoyed their evening. I thought the restaurant was pretty nice. They do have good pizza. Congratulations to those who received awards this year.

Last month, February 3, Lt. Commander Vicki Gore, Rear Admiral Ron Novak and I went to the Youngstown Phantoms Hockey Teddy Bear Toss. Basically, you wait until the Phantoms score their first goal of the night, then let the stuffed toys fly! It was just amazing the number of toys that got chucked onto the ice! A bit over 3600, I do believe, 7 directly from us, one in memory of Captain Kari Novak. The toys were collected, packed, and sent out within probably 15-20 minutes to a part of the Akron Children's Hospital in the area I do believe. It was as much fun for the adults as for the kids!

In other news, the Med, Psych, and Engineering departments are gearing up for our annual trip to Cleveland to help out the Lagrange at the Fan Expo. I do know Ron is cosplaying for sure and if anyone is looking for Trek autographs, Brent Spinner will be there this year!

Star Trek TNG and DS9 were not the only Sci fi appearances for John DeLancie and Nana Visitor. We found them in an episode of the Doctor Who spin off Torchwood's last story arch! Go figure!

Well, anyway, till next month.

PET FLEET-We're Not Just Pretty Faces-Part 2

By RAdm. Janice R. Graham

The pickups went as planned on Earth, then the ship headed out to their rendezvous with the team for the planet which was desperately asking for help. There was a meet-and-greet with the Iceland pets, three huge canines and several assorted smaller animals including a ferret named Ringer. During this gathering, as they sipped at bowls of water, Brewster asked the dogs politely, "What are your names, please? Bjorn? Sven?"

The largest of the three looked at the others and they all laughed. "No," he said shaking his head. "I am Bill. He is Joe, and that is Pete."

The others looked astonished, then with a grin, Brewster said, "Well, you got me there. I'm sorry, I didn't mean to sound..."

"No problem," came from Pete. "Icelanders are normal people who give their pets normal names most of the time. That's not to say there isn't a name more in keeping with the country but that's not usual. Every so often, to be funny, someone will choose a name that's all but impossible to pronounce."

"What do you do then?" Tyler asked.

Bill shrugged. "Call him Dave. Or her Jane. Or whatever they say to call them."

"Like Jonesy," Joe said.

Pete and Bill grinned. "Yes, like him!"

Joe turned back to Brewster and Jake. "Jonesy was one of those. His friend gave him a name that was one hundred and thirty letters long."

"What?!" gasped Jake. Brewster's jaw just dropped, as did many of those listening.

"Oh, yes," Bill said. "It was totally pronounceable if you took it five or six letters at a time...and if you didn't mind spending several minutes saying it. His friend said he did it because people were always in a hurry and that would slow them down."

Pete chuckled. "So we asked him what we should call him. He said Jones, or even Smith, both were in there somewhere! We called him Jones, which turned into Jonesy. Great guy. He wanted to come with us but he's a new dad."

"His lady says," Joe laughed, "she's going to name the pups A, B, C, and so on!"

Jake stepped closer. "If you don't mind my asking, why is it important for people from your country to come along?"

Joe answered. "From what we were able to overhear, the planet you're going to has much ice and extreme cold areas. Who better to advise them than those who live in it on Earth?"

"I agree!" said Sergey. "I'm from Siberia!"

"So you know cold, too!" Bill said. "Not like our cold, of course."

The stories of cold got so funny as they tried to top each other that the others just stood back and howled—literally—with laughter. One of the funniest came from Sergey, who said, "At home, it is so cold, our barks come out of our mouths as ice cubes. We have to drop them in a fire to find out what we're saying!"
